Lucky Jefferson is seeking applications from undergraduate or graduate students for a new Arts Research Development Fellowship! This virtual role is perfect for students with an interest in research, statistics, and the literary arts; this role directly supports Lucky Jefferson’s community research programs while collaborating with a diverse community of writers and artists.

This role is remote (meaning you can work from wherever) and you can expect a time commitment of up to 15 hours, or less, a month, depending on needs and time commitment.

Tasks you can expect to work on include:

- Co-partnering with Lucky Jefferson to learn more about LJ research programs, and data opportunities.
- Utilizing existing cross-sectional data sources (surveys, focus group stats, etc.) and collecting new data.
- Supporting future interviews, focus groups, and surveys.
- Organizing aggregated data into a meaningful output (report, whitepaper, etc.).

Who We Look For:

Undergraduate or Graduate students who have a passion for research, and all things literary arts; students who are interested in gaining experience early on and want to learn how to creatively lead through research and produce inclusive and engaging solutions and reports.

What You’ll Earn:

- $18/hr
• College Credit

• Experience working for an award-winning publisher

Contract Duration:

Three months from start date, or December 31, 2023.

Start Date:

October 2, 2023, or when the role is filled.

Please send a resume, research writing samples, and any examples of reports you’ve created in the past to luckyjeffersonlit@gmail.com. If you have a website, please share that as well.
